GOLD HILL NEWS in 1917. Editor & publisher H.E. Wharton shown. Photo courtesy Ted Wharton
Telephones were few so the news was spread by the weekly newspaper.
Wharton was also dealer for Geary trucks, (see sign in window).
Business was sold in 1926 to C.J. Shorb.

Owen Woods at the wheel, H.E. Wharton passenger side, F. Wallace Sears Jr. & Mrs Sears & Ida Fay Starms Wharton in back seat. Following elopement and marriage in Hornbrook, CA Sept. 3, 1916 Wharton bought the Gold Hill News from Sears later that year.

DARLING & PENNINGER LIVERY STABLE & Feed Store in late 1800s. Easily accessable from the Stage road it afforded a fine layover for passengers at Gold Hill Hotel as well as a rest for the horses and drivers. The Hay Blacksmith was nearby for needed repairs.

FIRE starts on 2nd Avenue May 5, 1915. Pall of smoke drew crowd from town and surrounding areas. Primitive fire suppression equipment was no match for the fast burning blaze. Cause of fire was thought to be "spontaneous combustion" in hay in livery stable.

Fire consumes most of block on second Ave. Note antiquated fire apparatus in use. Hand operated pumps were no match for big fires. Gold Hill's first real fire engine was built on a Stutz car donated by Joe Blair. Photo courtesy Phillis Newell

Gold Hill's suspension bridge allowed foot traffic over the Rogue River. It was held in place by cables that were attached to the Hay home and bedrock on the Gold Hill side and to the Fleming home and a tree on the Echo Mountain side. It was a favorite form of entertainment for area boys, who would wait until an unsuspecting traveler was midway across the bridge, then jump on the ends to make the center of the bridge jump and sway back & forth. This was definitily an unappreciated form of "Monkey Business". COVER PHOTO, 1900-1902 Photo of City of Gold Hill taken from Echo Mountain. This shot shows the east end of town with most of business district at the time on 4th Ave. Photo courtesy Ted Wharton from a post card sent from his Great Grandmother, Eva Newton to his Grandmother Edith (Newton) Starns in Crook County in 1902.
